About

- Our platform allows people to share their stories and also view other people's stories about their experiences with the various difficulties of college life.
- main message: allow users a space of sharing and of healing and hope that students would feel strengthened and empowered that it's okay to be honest and vulnerable.
- also provide resources to certain counseling groups on campus or around the city that students can go to if they find that they need specific counseling.

Learning points

1. Project Brief

- We wanted to start with a smaller target audience and focused on targeting college students
- In the end, we decided to create a website that allows for students to share their struggles in life that includes: mental illness, college struggles, family struggles, etc.

2. Wireframe

3. Target Audience Test Results

- Feedback results:
 - Lacking context: user feels either felt thrown into it or were confused of what to do
 - people didn't like the timed animation and thought the website was broken
 - The navigation bar was hard to find on the stories page
 - would have liked the clickable stars to be more obvious

College is a period of growth and transition. No one has to go through that alone.

This is a space where you can share your own stories and experiences as well as see what others are going through during this time.
